Volleyball regular earns international MVP

By Joel Priest SPECIAL TO THE DRUM

Daughter of a five-time Idaho High School Activities Association State Champion head coach, and herself later one of her players at Gooding High, Brittanie Toone grew up quite familiar with the name 'Shoshone.'

Particularly when she saw it emblazoned on uniforms across the volleyball net, and maybe no more so than during her junior and senior seasons - when the Lady Senators came up short in their hunt to gain skipper Jolene Toone a sixth crown, while their neighbors in adjacent Lincoln County celebrated IH-SAA Class 1A titles in both 2004 and '05.

Life did go on, and Toone departed GHS in Spring 2006 ready for a college-basketball future at Walla Walla (Wash.) Community College - the volleyball head coach there happened to be an unrelated Tim Toon - from '06-08. One of her classmates there, ironically, was fellow guard Katie Strunk, who'd been part of SHS' back-toback State Championships as well as a State Basketball '04-05 season.

the Lady Indians placed third in '05-06. Toone, meanwhile, would receive nods before graduating owning a 3.88 grade-point average (Strunk's was 3.94) and helped Gooding save fifth (winning the consolation side of the bracket) at the Class 3A State Tournament ending the '05-06 hoops campaign. A little more than ten years later, 'Shoshone' suddenly

Winder shares 'Words Like Love' with world's largest library

Staff report NATIVE NEWS ONLINE STAFF

From Turtle Island to performing internationally, Indigenous artists are promoting positivity and empowerment. Last month, Duckwater Shoshone, Southern Ute, and Pyramid Lake Paiute author and motivational speaker Tanaya Winder visited the UK with artists Frank Waln, Lumhe Sampson and Samsoche Sampson from Dream Warriors for an artist collaboration on sacred spaces.

During the trip Winder was able to deposit her debut poetry collection "Words Like Love" into the three major libraries in the UK. These libraries included the Liverpool Archives, the Bodleian Library at Oxford University, and the British Library in London, which is considered the largest library in the world by number of items catalogued.

Published in September 2015 by West End Press, her debut collection has since sold out of its 1st edition in less than six months. Now into its second print-run, the book and its messages continue to traverse many spaces including Canada, where its been taught at Western University in London, Ontario, Stuttgart Germany, where Winder performed at the opening of The North America Native Film Festival where guests included the Sila Singers, actress Roseanne Supernault, and musician Frank Waln.

While getting one's book could be deemed a huge accomplishment, Winder says her favorite book tour visits have been to the Pine Ridge Reservation in South Dakota, Solen High School in ND, the Red Lake Reservation in Minnesota, and her home on the Southern Ute Reservation. "I wrote the book I needed to read," Winder says. "I love my people and where I come from. This book is a gift to everyone who has taught me about love."

Described as "a love song into such major libraries for a generation" by the Mvskok/Creek poet, musician, and performer Joy Harjo, "Words Like Love" will now make its way to New York City on July 30 and 31, 2016 where Winder will perform at the Lincoln Center Out of Doors events alongside poets Tusiata Avia, Toni Blackman, Moe Clark, Natalie Diaz, Baba Israel, Noel Quiñones, Terisa Siagatonu, Elisabet Velasquez, G Yamazawa, and Gustavo Zapoteco.

The daily focus in the museum is the 26 cases in the Permanent Gallery: each case is being meticulously cleaned and vacuumed. Soon, pre-selected objects will begin migrating from the Museum's collection vault to the Permanent Gallery display cases. Once the displays are complete, approximately 300 items will be available for viewing.

The first group of objects that will be placed back on display have two things in common: the object is part of the Southern Ute Museum's own collection, and the object had once been in a display case.

An object that is part of the Museum has a "home", or location where the object can be found. Right now, all objects in the tribal museum collection that will return to public display have been identified. For easy reference, each row in the Vault has tags, which identify "homes" of objects. Tags contain information on shelf identification and box or shelf location of an object; additional information on the tags identify where an object will be placed in the Permanent Gallery. # Youth conference focuses on environment

By Damon Toledo THE SOUTHERN UTE DRUM

From July 25 through July 27, the Environmental Leadership and Knowledge Seminar (ELKS) hosted a productive youth conference that studied on the fundamentals of air quality, water quality, and recycling. Youth participants gathered with members from the Environmental Protection Division (EPD) to learn about the department's duties. The conference was divided into three groups that focused on key issues - Methane Monday, Tainted Water Tuesday, and Recycled Waste Wednesday. Youth participants were given a variety of hands on activities instructed by members from the EPD.

"It's great that you are all joining us for this conference, because everything you're going to learn about is already impacting the reservation," David Heermance, Air Quality Compliance Specialist said. "Having knowledge about how these departments preserve different resources will be a necessity for those of you who may want to go into the same field."

The youth group kicked off the conference with a game of bingo where they identified various safety equipment and uniforms used in the work field.

Afterwards, Camille Keith from the J&R Environmental Programs gave a lecture on identifying acidic rain using dyes and a color chart. The youth group studied with an assortment of elements to determine tion given to us."

"The group learned a lot on how serious these environmental issues can be," Keith stated. "It's important that everyone is aware of what impacts the Earth and our environment."

Throughout the week, the youth group participated in activities that expanded on these subjects, including field trips to Ute 3 air monitoring station, Scott's Pond, and Beaver Creek.

"The kids really seemed to enjoy learning about environmental issues," stated Crystal Kelly, air quality specialist. "They're enjoying the activities, and we're happy to teach them about these different topics."

EPA seeks assistance from Ute tribes

By Sacha Smith

The Environmental Protection Agency Region 8 met with the tribe to discuss the plan for the Bonita Peak Mining District proposed National Priority List Site (NPL), Wednesday, July 27. Several federal agencies are participating in the NPL process, including the Bureau of Land Management and the US Forest Service.

The EPA is looking to the Ute tribes for help with pointing out cultural resources in the area of the mine sites, as well as helping with the human health risk assessment.

As part of the superfund process, the EPA has to go through NEPA (National Environment Policy Act) for each of the 48 sites identified in the Bonita Mining District, Tom Johnson Environmental Programs Division Head said.

The EPA has to go in and identify the cultural resources within certain boundaries around the sites to see if there are any artifacts or old encampments, Thompson said. Often times an archaeologist surveys the area to determine where old historical sites are located in the area.

In this case, since the Ute tribes have a history in the area, the archaeologist wants to work with the Ute tribes to identify any potential historical Ute sites. The EPA is hoping the Ute tribes will be able to help identify locations that may be of cultural importance to the Ute people. Such sites may include trails or gathering sites.

NAGPRA reps Alden and Cassandra Naranjo were at the meeting to provide cul-

Alden, asked that the Ute THE SOUTHERN UTE DRUM Mountain Ute Tribe be involved in tours and meetings to help determine what sites may be of cultural importance.

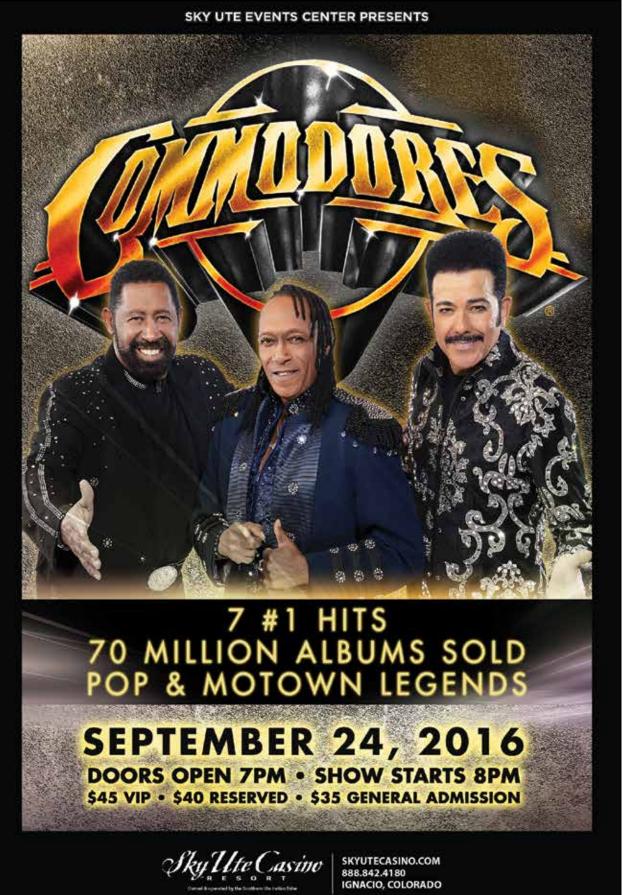

> In additional to identifying culturally important sites, the EPA is also conducting a human health risk assessment.

Toxicologist and Human Health Risk Assessor, Susan Griffin said the EPA would be working on a study to determine the possible effects the mine sites have on human health. Which may be of concern to the Ute tribes since some plants, and possibly food sources, may be located in the proposed Bonita Peak Mining area.

"In the case of tribal resources the EPA wants to look at the plants in the area and see if they have been up taking metals," Johnson said. "So that if the membership are gathering plants, fruit or berries from those areas they want to collect those and sample them to see if they have been impacted by the metals from the sites."

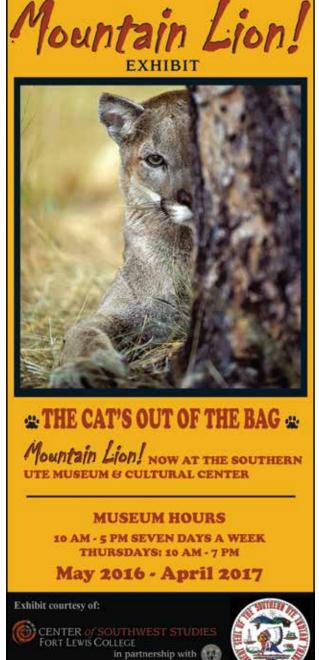

For example, if there are willows in the area. Cassandra Naranjo spoke to the group about how the willows are used for making cradleboards. The assessment would help determine if the willows are up taking metals and if how people were using the willows would be harmful to their health.

"It would be helpful if any of the membership use plants or fish in certain areas ... it would be helpful for the risk assessors to know where those areas are ... then they can use that to help asses the risk to human tural guidance to the group. health," Johnson said.

brought something really good to the table. We all had the same skill level – as soon as we practiced that first day, we clicked," said Thompson. "Our first game, we lost by one point, but other than that ... we talked, communicated so well; we were a really good team."

Able to bounce back from a 35-34 loss to the ironically-dubbed 'Bobcats' - IHS' real-life mascot - pieced together from Minnesota and both Dakotas beginning the two-day competition, only a 39-35 loss to the continental Gladstone Sharks ending Day 1 action denied Thompson, Toone, et al, a shot at the top prize.

With fellow CHSAA Class 2A member Olivia Himmel (now a sophomore outside hitter at Ault Highland) and graduated Four Corners regional standout middle/OH Krista Grover of 2A Blanding, Utah, San Juan on the roster, the crew went on a 5-0 rampage on Day 2. And after taking revenge against the Cats, 46-30, the Thompson-set side finished 8-2 overall by beating the Hawks (gathered from Maryland, New York, Ohio and Michigan) 47-32.

"The way the tournament worked was that we played two 15-minute halves and switched sides after one half. Running continuous score," explained Toone. "Shoshone was very knowlto hit and put them in position to be successful."

"Our communication ... if we made five mistakes and

"It was really funny, actually. Because the team playing for first place just won, they named them, and this guy was just talking," recalled Thompson. "My mom and I ... we weren't listening, just making our own conversation, and my friend turned to me and said, 'Yeah Shoshone!' And she was, like, yelling!"

"I was like, 'What?' And so I look around, everyone's looking at me, so I get off the bleachers and go to the front and the guy said that I was MVP! I was so shocked! I had no idea!"

"I was shocked because I had many talented players and they played well together," said Toone.

"Shoshone played, in my eyes, the hardest position on the court. She led by example and knew where to set the ball and find the opponents' weaknesses. She was a hustler and improved on the ball if it wasn't a good pass ... had a great serve and during some games served for long amounts of time."

"When I'm playing I don't think about trying to be the best or trying to show off, I guess," Thompson said. "I go out and I play, and I don't even know that I'm standing out to people."

Or, in this case, more than 199 others.

"It was out of 200 girls knew how her hitters liked from all of the teams -Australian and U.S.," said Thompson, accompanied by her mother on the unique adventure to the land of surf, kangaroos, koalas and the notorious Vegemite food spread (Thompson gave her seal of approval to Arnott's TimTams).

"The really cool part is, the distributed after all was said coaches from Down Under "We had girls from four and done, there wasn't a or any other teams, they had son was announced as the the award. It was the officials that saw me," she continued. "And how it worked is, they picked people - like, ranked them first, second, third and on - who should get MVP. The higher they got, the more points they got, so by the time they had finished I had the most points!"

"Some of the officials were surprised that she was only going to be a junior. They thought she had graduated and was maybe heading to play college ball," Toone said. "It was an honor coaching Shoshone and she was well deserving of the award."

After helping Ignacio post a 15-9 overall record and gain a 2A-Region G postseason appearance in 2015, Thompson expects her one-off experience to serve her well this fall. "I'm going to try to bring positive vibes, as much as the girls on my team did here, and try to communicate with everybody as good as I can," she said. "Even if I don't know them as well - that's how it had to work here, because nobody knew anybody! - and be positive on the court at all times."

"One thing that I think she can take from this trip is to enjoy the game and communication is key to the game," Toone added. "She is versatile and can play multiple positions, beneficial in any high school program."

Domestic changes may be in the works this month as the planets initiate adjustments to your household. It won't be easy at first due to MERCURY'S retrograde on the 30th. Later on the 27th VENUS unites with JUPITER and helps lead you to a happy reunion with a family member. Celebrate GEMINI!

Thursday, Oct. 6, at the La Plata County Fairgrounds Exhibit Hall, Durango, Colo., from 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

The La Plata County Veterans Service Office, Veterans for Veterans, and Disabled American Veterans of Durango and Pagosa Springs are hosting the third Veterans Stand Down for homeless veterans of La Plata, Archuleta and Montezuma Counties. This event will provide the opportunity to homeless and struggling veterans to regain the support, encouragement and resources to help them integrate back into the civilian world. The one-day event will not only focus on the homeless veterans in our town, community and surrounding areas. We will be assisting at-risk and low-income veterans as well. All of the resources provided are to help them regain their confidence and self-esteem and to rebuild their lives in a positive, supportive way.

A Veterans Stand Down is a hand up, not a hand out. Readjustment and reintegration into civilian life is much more difficult than we can ever imagine. We encourage younger veterans who have recently been discharged to stop by and see what our community has to offer them during this time of transition.

We are seeking volunteers to provide resource tables for the veterans this day. For more information about this event or how you can help, you may contact either Peggy at 970-247-8589 or Jana at

Hugs can be good

By Don Oliver SPECIAL TO THE DRUM

It seems every time I turn on the news there is a story about a law enforcement officer being shot and killed, or wounded just because they're wearing a uniform. The people who work for the Colorado Parks and Wildlife (CPW) are part of that group of uniforms. So, to show more appreciation for the CPW folks I suggest we redo a website that the Wildlife Council of Colorado has. It's called www.huganangler. com. If you get television from Denver you may have seen their spots. I believe we need a website titled www. hugacpwperson.com.

Even if you are on the waters of Colorado all the time, you may not know exactly what is the purpose of the CPW. I visited with Joe Lewandowski, who is the CPW public information specialist for the southwest region of Colorado. He directed me to the CPW website, plus gave me information that is hard to find on the website. He is a wealth of knowledge. Their website states, "The Colorado Parks and Wildlife is charged by statute to protect, preserve, enhance, and manage wildlife for the use, benefit and enjoyment of the people of the this state and its visitors. The creation of regulations by the Parks and Wildlife Commission and the enforcement of season dates, bag limits, and license requirements facilitate wildlife management objectives such as: determining the numbers and types of wildlife taken, and providing engage in other wildlife-related recreation." That's a lot to do. They do this with 886 permanent employees, and 1,059 temporary employees.

This group of people watches over, and takes care of 42 parks that encompass 220,385 acres, and 346 state wildlife areas totaling 679,000 acres. Within those areas, anglers have access to 2,000 natural lakes, 800 reservoirs, and 9,500 miles of streams. To help keep the fish populations stable, there are 19 hatcheries that stock 90 million fish annually. These numbers don't take into consideration all the national forests the CPW works in and monitors. The budget for 2014-15 was 213.9 million dollars. Any way you want to break the budget down, it's a lot of work for not much money. Money for the CPW comes from licenses, grants, the federal government and severance taxes. None of it helps the CPW do their job. comes from sales tax.

For those of us that fish in Colorado we are most likely to come into contact with an employee of CPW that is either a park ranger of wildlife forget all the other law enofficer. We sometimes refer forcement people you meet.

to them as game wardens. They are that, and more. To start with they are certified Colorado peace officers. That designation in and of itself is hard to earn. The peace officer rating is needed because not only do they deal with violations in the forest; they are also called in to work against organized crime and drug cartels. But, before that designation is earned, a person wanting to have a career with the CPW needs at least a bachelor's degree in biology, natural resource management, parks and recreation administration, or some other closely related field. Obviously, it is not easy to be CPW officer or one of the many people you never see.

So, how do we as fishermen behave on the rivers and lakes? In 2015 the CPW issued 5,209 total citations We as fishermen accounted for 1,626 of those violations. We can do better.

As my conversation with Joe wound down I asked him, "What is the number one thing the CPW needs from the people using all of our natural resources?" Joe gave me two items, "realize what all the CPW does, and be supportive of higher licensing fees." Because I'm a senior my fishing license cost me $1.00 this year. I think it is time our fees for in-state licenses comes to a level that

But, let's not only raise the fees. Let's give some hugs and thank you's to the people of the CPW. And, while you're at it, don't

Momma's right arm

By Don Folsom SU POLICE DEPT.

As a little child, riding in the car in the days before seatbelts, I remember my mother braking really hard and simultaneously reaching her right arm out to pin me back in my seat. It happened so fast; I thought I had been slammed back in the seat by a football player and not my mother. I couldn't accurately judge the speed or the amount of force my mother used, but it was impressive.

In the old days, what mother would brake real hard just to watch their child slide off the vinyl front seat (like it was greased) and be hurled towards their vehicle's massive metal dashboard and not try to catch the child? It was the only protection a caring mother had available in the old days.

I tell this story because today we have child passenger restraints, air bags, anti-lock brakes, electronic stability control, collision avoidance systems, crumple zones and other incredible lifesaving technology that is better than momma's right arm during braking. None of this wonderful technology can work if momma doesn't use it.

Today, with all the technology available, some parents are not being very caring. Within the last couple of weeks, the Southern Ute Police Department has pulled over several uncaring parents on traffic stops. The children were either not in their car seats or no car seats were inside the vehicle. Some children were even standing up inside the car when the officer made the approach to the driver.

Momma's right arm is not a suitable safety device for a caring parent compared to today's technology. One loose child ricocheting around the inside of a vehicle during a crash can kill other siblings and even parents within the vehicle.

All of these parent's had excuses for why their children were not being protected. None of the excuses were valid or reasonable enough make up for their lack of caring. Whether an underage child placed on a passenger seat in front of an airbag that could kill them or the child is strapped to a car seat that is left unstrapped to the car, no parent should be allowed to put their child in danger of injury or death when there are so many ways to prevent it.

Momma's right arm might have been all she had back in the day but the truth is, children still died. Children are better protected today but only if we use that protection. The Southern Ute Police Department would like to see more people using that protection. A child passenger safety technician is available at (970) 563-0246.
